Freshly cut flowers can be replaced with Sola wood flowers as a sustainable and green option. They resemble actual flowers and are constructed from Aeschynomeneaspera, a kind of flowering plant in the Fabaceae family, which produces renewable wood. One of the lightest woods in the world is an Aeschynomene species. Aeschynomene woods have a corky texture and have the feel of thermocol or are even lighter. It can absorb any colour and ranges in colour from dazzling white to off-white. Some traditional Indian crafts and artwork, as well as beautiful pieces for worship, etc., are made from this corky material. These blooms endure forever.

Professionals carefully slice the remaining root after removing the bark to create thin sheets of sola wood, which is developed into sola wood flowers. A complex pattern is etched into the flexible white tissue of the sola flower. The origins of sola decorations are in Indian tradition, which extends to the western hemisphere as well. The tissue of the Sola plant has a spongy appearance and is incredibly flexible and elastic. As a result, it can be utilised to create a variety of forms and patterns. Since it has a silky finish and a smooth texture, it can be tailored and kept vibrant and alive for a very long time. When embellished with additional creations or feats, it displays flamboyance and splendour.

Advantages of Using Sola Wood Flowers

- Sola wood flowers don't need sunlight or water to grow. They ought to be kept out of children's reach and shielded from severe winds. Clean the arrangements gently if dust settles on them. Make sure the flowers don't get wet and store them in a cool, dry area. Flowers that have been dyed shouldn't be stored in direct sunlight. The hue can wane.
- People are drawn to it because making custom decorations out of sola wood flowers is so easy. Due to the fragility of the natural alternatives, several arrangements and decorations are not feasible. Wood flowers are excellent for flower arrangements and decorations due to their strong resistance. The decorations are simple to adapt to the setting or for personal taste.

- Sola wood flowers are more inexpensive than real flowers, which is why many individuals have begun employing them at various events. Bulk purchases of these flowers will likely result in even lower prices.
- The fact that sola wood flowers can be reused is the best argument in favour of using them for any occasion. The sola wood decoration can be reused repeatedly and even customised each time. A high usability level guarantees excellent returns on investment. Sola wood flowers, in contrast to real flowers, can last for many years. It is necessary to take care of the flowers and make sure they are not harmed.
